“Jeff Jesus” is Back in Southern California

Los Angeles, CA/December 20, 2011—Jeffrey Brian Liebowitz, best known as "Jeff Jesus" of the rock band, The Jesus Twins, has moved back to Los Angeles after spending the past three years living and performing his music in the live music capital of the world, Austin, Texas.

It was just over three years ago that, on August 5th, 2008, Eric Liebowitz, Jeff's identical twin brother and other half of the singing duo, was fatally wounded by the LAPD in the midst of a severe manic episode outside the residence Jeff and Eric shared in Encino, CA. In an instant, Jeff's entire life changed, and he relocated to Austin, TX to start a new life.

Since that time, Jeff has successfully navigated the Texas terrain, becoming one of the most recognized names on the Austin music scene. Dubbed "The King of Austin" by ardent fans, he has released an abundance of creative contributions including three CDs, two books, and a DVD. A documentary film about The Jesus Twins, produced by Jmar Entertainment, is also in the works.

Scads of Austinites gathered every Sunday evening to enjoy Jeff's live music at Casa De Luz, and it wasn't long before the Austin illuminati began to pay attention. Each week his audience grew and so did requests for crowd favorites such as the nostalgic ballad, "If Youth But Knew," the inquisitive, "Death by Chocolate" and the lyrically profound, "Pendulum Will Swing."

"After I lost my twin brother, the people in Austin took me in and made me one of their own. For that, I will always be grateful," says Jeff. "I look forward to the day I return with my new band and pay homage to all the great friends I made while I was there."

Now that Jeff is back in the big city, he is looking for a new west coast management team and looks forward to getting into the recording studio this winter. He explains, "Since I lost my best friend in 07, my twin brother in 08, and most recently, my beloved sister this past June to cancer, I feel like I have a team of angels guiding me. I guess it's kind of fitting that I am returning to the City of Angels."
